

Raveland's Long Bio:

Born in Cairo to Egyptian parents, Raveland's life has always been filled with music. His love for it has always been present ever since he can remember. "When I was still a little kid, Amr Diab, Mohammed Mounir and Mohammed Fouad were my favorite artists from the Arabic pop music industry. Considering the fact that I was raised in the UAE and had always been surrounded by different cultures, I used to listen to lots of international artists too. Some of my favorites were Blue, Westlife, Usher, Eminem and – don't judge me – Britney Spears!" – Raveland.

As he was growing older, his obsession with music was growing too to the extent that he began writing song lyrics in his 7th grade. This talent kept growing with him until his college years. He even used to write songs for some underground bands.

By 2007, his curiosity started developing towards trance music. "I began to listen to artists like Tiesto, Armin Van Buuren and – again, don't judge me – D-Devils." – Raveland. The rhythms and structures of trance music stole his attention that he started exploring other electronic music genres like house music. However, he was still a huge pop fan until 2012 when he fully drifted to EDM after attending Swedish House Mafia's "One Last Tour" concert in Dubai.

Raveland's real passion for electronic music was born after attending Tomorrowland Belgium 3 years in a row.

He recognized that he is meant to be part of the scene and not only a listener or a raver. In a very short period of time, he learned music production and DJing by the help of his brother, XABB, and his friends, EMAD, Farid and AJ and Sarah El-gohary, and even started his own SoundCloud podcast "Rave The Future" which plays Progressive house, Big Room house, Future house and Trance music.

Raveland also released some original tunes, remixes and mash ups on his SoundCloud page for free download to share his passion. He has recently created and introduced 3 new concepts that are available on his SoundCloud page:

"United Rave": A set of mixes of Progressive house, Big Room house and Trance created back to back with his friend EMAD.

"Future VibeZ": A set of mixes of Future House and Future Bass music.

"Tranced": A set of mixes of different kinds of Trance music including Progressive, Uplifting and even Psytrance.

Signed to Universal Music, Raveland's main goal is to be one of the leading artists in the EDM scene and make his "Way to Tomorrowland", which is also the name of one of his favorite productions that will be officially released very soon.
